MESSAGE FROM THE EDITORIAL BOARD

We are pleased to launch our first newsletter of the IACFP study centre , titled Weavings, which is aimed at disseminating the progress of all the work and research areas of our centre: research working groups and journal network, the scientific council activities, the representatives' college , the journal's actions, the board of directors and the board of management.

In this first issue, we present the Board of Directors' members and the IACFP 2023 Board of Directors, the call for papers for the AICPF Journal, issue 28, with the theme "Old Age", our editorial team for the new IACFP Newsletter, issue 28, with the theme "Old Age", and the new AICPF Newsletter, issue 2023.

We also invite all IACFP members to propose new topics for reflection and to join existing groups that are of interest to them. We also invite you to send us the scientific events that you organise in your respective associations and countries, to create an agenda that will be reflected in this newsletter.

We are open to all other contributions. Please do not hesitate to send us your proposals to

FUTURE LINES OF WORK

Interdisciplinary working group on family processes in transition. That is to say, to bring together demographers, psychoanalysts, sociologists and other professionals from different fields of knowledge. The proposal is to put together an enriching interdisciplinary approach from different angles, which will allow the focus on the mutational changes that the family/families of the 21st century are going through.

INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL OF COUPLE AND FAMILY PSYCHOANALYSIS

CALL FOR PAPERS
FOR THE JOURNAL N. 28

TITLE: Old age and the ageing process. A psychoanalytic perspective from the intersubjective links of couple and family.

The aim of issue 28 of the AICPF journal, which will come out in July 2023, is to approach old age and the ageing process from a psychoanalytic point of view, to provide original reflections and viewpoints on this universal and complex process. It is aimed primarily at couple and family therapists when dealing with older subjects, or when their patients are facing the senescence of their parents. It is also intended to be of interest to any caregiver whose practice leads them to encounter older people, either individually or as a family. To this end, papers based on theoretical or clinical contributions, including those from related sciences (sociology, demography, etc.), are invited. This issue, coordinated by Dr Anne Loncan, Irma Morosini and Dr Alejandro Klein, will be published in July 2023. Articles in English, French and Spanish are due by 15 April 2023. The editorial guidelines can be found on the IACPF website at the following addresses:

PRIMER ENCUENTRO INTERNACIONAL PSICOANALÍTICO DE PAREJA Y FAMILIA

Dear colleagues,

We are pleased to announce the launching of the First International Psychoanalytic Meeting on Couple and Family organised by the AIPPF, EFPP and COFAP (IPA). The International Meeting is born from the initiative of these three great institutions that meet for the first time, with the aim of opening new lines of reflection on the Clinical and Training, in the field of the family and the couple, integrating the present-day currents of psychoanalysis.

Organising Committee

María Eugenia Cid - Rosa Jaitín - Elizabeth Palacios

Secretary: Cristina Călărășanu
